Works

In my works I am interested in exploring the relationship between society, nature and technology. I achieve that through the painting and the depiction of predominantly natural scenes, in contrast to elements belonging to the digital world which find their way to a dialogue with the painting subjects, shifting their original meaning.

The natural world clashes with the digital elements introduced through smartphone, turned into a symbol which is deeply rooted within our daily life, an extension of our body and our perception.

From pictures of natural elements, I start a process which involves change, by taking pictures and redrawing new elements with the smartphone, questioning the painted image and opening the way to new creative possibilities.

Then, I transfer them on the canvas, stacking them on the background.

From the familiar and daily habit of the contemporary society of taking pictures, through editing, enhancing or adding new elements, mixed with oil painting techniques, my aim is to push the observer to think about the role of technology in our daily lives, and to create an atmosphere halfway between reality and imagination.

Two languages born from different necessities but linked together, both now belonging to the painting world.
